THIS WEEK

2nd Vice-President Dave Duchak presided over the meeting in the absence of President Boyd and wielded the gavel with a firm hand. He welcomed the presence of Murray Pawling who has recently been confined to his home under medical direction.

Allan Warrack introduced his guest, Ron Holmes, of Potter Realty. Al McClure announced a Mixed Golf Tournament to be held at Devon on either August 18 or 25, 1981. Chairman of the Convention Golf Tournament, Allan Warrack, then presented the Honest Golf Trophy to the winner, Tommy Douglas. It was a metal, mounted, miniature statue of half a horse. The reader is left to guess which half.

Anyone having a snapshot of Nelles Buchanan at the Convention is asked, please to get in touch with Gordon Rennie.

Ernie Siegel introduced Babe McAvoy, a Governor of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, who in a brief talk outlined the work of this body in promoting the game of golf. He stated that the Association had purchased the Glen Abbey Course in Oakville, Ontario, which is destined to become the home of the Cana-the game of golf. He stated that the Association had purchased the Glen Abbey Course in Oakville, Ontario, which is destined to become the home of the Canadian <sup>Open</sup> Golf Tournament. However, he gave some hope that the this event, ~~was~~ perhaps two or three <sup>years</sup> hence, would be played at the Mayfair Golf Club.

A film of the 1980 British Open was then shown with Stan Larson as projectionist. Our sincere thanks to both Babe and Stan.

And so to end on a bizarre note. July 29 is the anniversary of the death of the eccentric Dutch painter, Vincent Van Gogh, who died by his own hand in 1890. His name appears easier to write than to pronounce. The following explains the dilemma.

Van Gogh, Van Gogh, Van Gogh

It seems rather rough on Vincent Van Guff,
When those in the know call him Vincent Van Go
For unless I'm way off he was Vincent Van Goff.
